Align email marketing with customer journeys

Email Strategy: Process and Timeline

- Brainstorm content outside of the ESP
- Write the email draft in...
 - Google Docs
 - Evernote
 - Digital sticky note
 - Physical notebook
- How far in advance do you need to plan?

Email Strategy: Process and Timeline

- Create a review process with your team (or yourself)
 - Who will write the email copy?
 - Who will design the email template?
 - What email assets do you need from clients?
 - Who will test the email on different browsers and devices?
 - Who will schedule the email campaigns?
 - Who will review the campaign reports?

Subject Line:

Annie, are you OK? Are you OK, Annie?

Header Text:

Probably OK is good enough

Body:

What we would've sent on April Fools' Day if we could be bothered to send emails on their correct dates. It seemed like April 2 would be... ok.

We might be late to the 'new year, new me' game, but we've reflected on where we're at with RGE and where we want to be. We considered our passions, excitement for email, and our sense that all of you are family. We talked about it for about 5 minutes. It was good. Now, we're rolling out some changes.

"Really Good" felt overly ambitious. I mean, have you even lived through 2020? Really Good feels like a bridge too far. At first, we felt you deserved better, but we're just trying to make it through the day—ya know?

Meet Realistically OK Emails. We're still your probable source for email inspiration viewing. But we're resetting our standards as we come to terms with the fact that email, like us, is tired, and possibly eating its feelings.

With the new name and new logo, we give you OK practices:

- Build your next email with images only. It's just easier.
- Don't include live text in your email, it's just too rambunctious.
- Add title tags to all elements in your email template. Why not.
- Leave all table roles blank to avoid spam filters. Eat a can of spam.
- Craft a subject line no shorter than 80 characters. Size matters.
- Leave out the preview text and preheader. We want to see the "View in Browser" text in the inbox. It adds mystery.

CTA button text: ??

Update text in the template

- Change Email GIF of the week to "Email JIF of the week"
- Change See it in the email to "See the 10MB animation"

Send it in the email

DRIVE ACTION

What are your subscribers saying?

Is your copy working or do you need to update it?

Subscriber Quotes

THIS is why I read every email you send.

I'm a 41-year-old dude with hair past my shoulders and a crazy beard that makes me look like a character that wandered out of a Dostoevsky novel. And yet...I'm also a total Swifty.

So this subject line made me love your (already delightful and brilliant) email marketing that much more.

Stop trying to be funny when clearly you are not.

Just give me what I signed up for. I don't want to sift through bad attempts of stand-up comedy just to find what I am looking for.
